With winter firmly behind us, our vines are starting to push out new shoots that will hold this year's crop of grapes. After a relatively mild winter this year, we are looking forward to a harvest of high quality fruit this year.

We are also hoping our pluot trees (a cross between plums and apricots) will put forth their first viable crop this year. If so, you can look forward to a release of "plumcott" jam this winter.

In anticipation of long, warm summer days and nights, we have the perfect wine club release to match the season. Our 2014 Rosé is a big, dry Tavel style rosé like those of southern Rhône. It spent more time on the skins than lighter, crisper versions of rosé. It is a perfect match with the thinner, Italian style pizzas, or just sipping on your porch watching the sunset on a warm evening.

We are also releasing our 2014 Chardonnay. Like our Barrel Blanc, this vintage fermented on 100-percent Allier French oak and spent six months on the yeast lees while we periodically stirred the barrels. It is showing some incredible complexity of aroma and flavor.
